THEY THOUGHT "GREEN" ON A RED-letter day.

Up to 285 couples said "I do" and then planted mangrove seedlings in a Valentine's Day mass wedding held in a coastal area in Puerto Princesa City yesterday.

Organized by Palawan Bishop Federico Arigo, the services held in Balingasay Lake were sponsored by the city government.

Ex-justice backs GMA on SC chief

By Norman Bordadora

ONE OF THE FRAMERS OF THE 1987 Constitution, a candidate for senator in the state of deceased President Joseph Estrada, said President Maunipo-Arroyo could appoint Chief Justice Reynato Puno's successor on May 17 despite a law on appointments 40 days before the presidential election.

Regalado Maunipo, a retired associate justice of the Court of Appeals, said the constitutional law on mid-term appointments did not apply to the President's selection of members of the judiciary.

Contrary to the personal view of Fr. Joseph Bernas SJ, I agree that the appointment of members of the judiciary

The women are treated well—AFP

By Jerry E. Espinola and Joseph K. Uy

A NUMBER OF FEMALE health workers detained at Camp Capatpin in Tanay, Rizal, were "sexually molested" by their military captors, according to the mother of a detainee.

One of the detainees, 27-year-old Jane Balles, made the disclosure on Tuesday to her mother, Ofelia Beltran Balles, who stated her at the military camp. Ofelia is a daughter of Crispin Beltran, the late labor leader and Akasapang party-list representative.

She volunteered to live there and the other detainees were hospitalized when brought to a comfort room.

There, soldiers searched their private parts, Ofelia told the bureau at her house in Balingasay, Quezon City, in the presence of Sen. Jovito Salgado.

The military described the allegations as

Aquino, Villar shift focus to votes of poor

By Armento Doronila

IN THE WATERGATED PULSE ASIA survey of Jan. 23-26, the ground under the presidential race shifted violently, changing completely by the parameters of the 2010 election.

And making it more volatile, less than three months into the polls.

The survey showed the three races since September 2009, Sen. Benigno Aquino III, locked in a statistical tie with Sen. Manuel Villar, Aquino pulled 35 percent and Villar, 35 percent, as the first choice of respondents.

THINK ISSUE

It's GMA, stupid

By Fernando del Mundo Chag I-lac

Editor's note: Following to the first in a series of reports on major issues in the May 31 presidential election.

THE SUCCEEDING BEGINS barely four months before July 30, 2010.

The question is: Are we better off today than we were at the start of the new millennium under Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo? Was her second term the best of times, or was it the worst of times? Are we all going to heaven, or are we all going to the other way?

A two-page ad published in major newspapers on Jan. 20 asked all the accomplishments of the Arroyo administration had added up since the sixth power year ago in a people's power revolution.

The numbers seemed to indicate a path to Novena. Garcia's top team, Garcia's top team. That was then. This is now.

UNILAB ng BAYAN

Likas sa ating mga Pilipino ang tumulong sa ating kapwa. Handa tayong mag-alay ng ating sarili at tumugon sa pangangailangan hindi lamang ng ating pamilya kundi pati ng ating bayan. Ganito rin ang adhikan ng Unilab.

Naniniwala ang Unilab na karapatan ng bawat Pilipino ang mabuting kalusugan, kung kaya't patuloy kaming naninindigan sa paggawa ng kalidad na gamot sa abot-kayang halaga.

Tulad ninyo, Pilipino din ang Unilab. Kaisa ng bawat Pilipino na nagmamahal sa bayan.

Trusted Quality Healthcare

Long before the passage of the Cheaper Medicines Act of 2008, Unilab Laboratories Inc. has been in the forefront of the movement to give Filipinos access to affordable quality medicines, consistent with the vision of the company's founder Jose Y. Campos.

Over the years, Unilab has made its mark in manufacturing and distributing trusted generic medicines, putting down their prices at levels significantly lower than what leading multinational firms. In 2008, Unilab launched Adkeda-Med, a price reduction program that lowered the prices of several of its frequently-prescribed drugs by 30 to 40 percent. The program covered 63 products considered as essential drugs commonly prescribed by doctors. By 2012, Unilab launched a new division, Rubbled, which markets off-patent medicines that are priced 20 to 80 percent lower than equivalent branded drugs.

Since 2002, Unilab has been challenging foreign patents that were filed simply to attend the patent owners' monopoly and not necessary to protect the integrity of the patent system. In the US, 55% of cases involving pharmaceutical patents resulted in victory for the generic company as the patents were essentially found to be frivolous or the generic company is not at all infringing," said Jose Maria A. Ochava, Unilab Vice President for Legal. One such challenge resulted in the Unilab launch of Aramun, the generic version of Aramunox, Calcium, an anti-cholesterol medicine, pitting it against Lipitor, which is manufactured by American pharmaceutical giant Pfizer Inc. As a result, this medicine which has to be taken daily by those suffering from high cholesterol became more affordable. Unilab's Aramun is up to 80 percent cheaper than Lipitor's price.

Unilab prides itself as having products proved lower than multinational, and continues to find ways to offer products that will cater to the needs of the majority of Filipinos. Ochava said that "Unilab was founded on the belief that every Filipino has a right to affordable quality healthcare and it is the obligation of every Unilab employee to make sure that this becomes a reality."

This year, Unilab is actively seeking partnerships with socially-responsible business enterprises, community-based organizations, local governments and other civic groups to pilot various models to bring sustainable quality healthcare to the town of the poor. This is pursuant to the vision of its founders and current shareholders. "We believe the poor deserves the same quality healthcare that people who can afford are getting now. This can be done. However, we cannot do it alone so we partner with groups like Raposo and Ateneo School of Government," Ochava said.

Ex-justice backs GMA

Enriquez Jr.

Incumbent Enr, especially those of the Chief Justice and justices of the Supreme Court) is not covered by the law on disbarment appointments," Manalang said in a submission to the Judicial and Bar Council (JBC).

The JBC is tasked with submitting a list of nominees from which the President may choose to fill a vacancy in the judiciary.

Enr, then chief of the Ateneo law school and secretary of the 1986 Constitutional Commission, has said that Article 7, Section 15 of the Constitution, prevents Mc Arroyo from appointing Enr's law school or law school graduates to the judiciary.

Article 7, Section 15 of the Constitution, prohibits the President from appointing officials in government posts two months before the presidential election. The law contains penal provisions for such cases.

"It is clear from the provisions of the 1986 Constitutional Commission that the law on disbarment appointments under Article 7 of the Constitution refers only to appointments to the executive department," Manalang said.

Manalang said Article 9 of the Constitution, which refers to the judiciary, did not contain a prohibition on the President appointing members of the judiciary in the last months of his or her term.

"The reason is simple, the Constitution envisions the judiciary as a separate and independent branch of government. The provisions applicable to it are not applicable to the others," he said to the JBC.

The JBC has decided to wait the nomination process for the year of 2010, who will convene the 17.

The JBC, however, deferred its decision to submit the list of at least five nominees to Mc Arroyo because of the controversy surrounding the law on disbarment appointments to the judiciary. The JBC instead listed experts and commentators for Manalang to submit their views on the matter.

He said it was difficult to claim that the constitutional law on disbarment appointments that prevented the executive department could be made applicable to the judiciary.

"One can say private law from doing so," Manalang said. "The fact is that there is no prohibition against it under the Constitution, so even though it is fairly trying to make us believe."

Aquino, Villar shift focus to votes of the poor

Enriquez Jr.

In that order, it is a remarkable finding, getting 12 percentage points from the October 2009 survey, while Aquino declined by 4 percentage points. The survey marked the turning point of the resurgence of Villar and the decline of Aquino.

Less obvious but as important is the result that while Aquino's rating was falling, that of his running mate, Sen. Manuel "Bong" Marcos Jr., was rising.

Villar's rating rose to 44 percent in an earlier survey when it had appeared to lag a run-off campaign between Aquino's Liberal (L) and Villar's Nacionalista Party (NP). The case appears to be narrowing to a tie between Aquino and Villar, as the race of the candidates have followed.

For example, ex-President Joseph Estrada was struggling at 12 percent and Villar Trinidad, a candidate of the administration's ruling coalition (Lakas-Kampi-OPP), at 1 percent. The ratings of the two are as starkly mismatched.

According to Villar's building up, since then Aquino, the survey shows the ability to lose in the presidential race, where changes in the lead could be expected in the end result of the race.

In the Jan. 23-24 survey of Social Weather Stations, Aquino was the preferred choice of 41 percent, down from 49 percent in the Dec. 29 survey. Villar and Estrada 49 percent in the Jan. 23-24 poll. Villar gained 2 percentage points, while Estrada lost 33 percent, and 4 percentage points from their previous poll.

Is P switching horses?

In the first presidential race, the state survey found 49 percent of the respondents said they would vote for Villar, putting him ahead of his rivals—Sen. Loren Legarda, Villar's running mate, at 28 percent, down 4 percentage points, followed by Manuel "Bong" Marcos Jr., Estrada's running mate, at 16 percent, up 4 percentage points.

Among the respondents, it is only the LFPs which its presidential race presidential candidates are party names running in the principle of unity. But most do not forget that Villar abandoned his original plan to run for president to make way for Aquino, who was thought to be a stronger candidate for president after the survey showed that Villar was losing poorly.

One question arose: Is Villar's survey to stage a key in Villar's pulling away from Aquino? There are suggestions that the LFP withdrawal from the vice presidential race in the third election.

The survey, showing an increase, points to the stability of the campaign and the rise in Villar's rating in the survey, which Aquino and Villar are going to handle in two weeks to the election's outcome.

They are targeting the undecided voters which increased from 1 percent in late December to 2 percent. They are also the focus of competition to the vote of the poor, the most numerous among all the socioeconomic classes.

Counting the poor

According to the Pulse Asia survey, Aquino was the top choice among the ABC classes, the rich and middle class with 27 percent against Villar's 23 percent, and 17 percent in the middle class, with 48 percent for Aquino against Villar's 33 percent. Villar led in the E class, the poorest, 39 percent against Aquino's 33 percent. This survey marked the first time since 2007.

According to my colleague, Manuel Quinsig, Villar's poor economic success in his campaign specifically in 10 years old and above, including to Class D and E, in 2009, he had a 47.8 Pwts.

In the first week of January, he had 20k votes in 2009. He is a moderately successful to have spent 190k million, and during the first week of January about 170 million and 120 million for the whole month.

Female detainees abused, mom told

but as "purely propagandist" aimed at discrediting the operations carried out in Moeng.

U.S. Col. Robert Rembert Jr., spokesperson of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, said the detainees were being treated well.

"Female soldiers keep writing me from detention while male soldiers are assigned solely to guard male detainees," he said.

Ordoña goes but full content for the incentive to disclose her daughter's name in this report. The said son was sharing a cell with another female detainee on Saturday, the last time she saw her at the camp.

Jose, an employee of the Council for Human Development, a management organization, was among the 41 health workers, including two doctors, who were rounded up on Feb. 13, a military and police team arrested the workers while they were attending training seminar in Moeng. But, an spokesman said they were concerned about.

Of the 41, more than half are women.

Rights observed

Former and 160, Gen. Jorge Beneria, chief of the 2nd Infantry Division, was personally supervising conditions inside the camp to ensure that the rights of the detainees were observed.

But Ordoña said her daughter's human rights were grossly violated. "She stated, but she said she was being to be executed by firing," she said.

Beneria's daughter said Jose and her fellow health workers were "intimidated" by their arrest at the hands of soldiers from military units.

Ordoña said she also worried that Jose, who has a "solid case of epilepsy," might have attacks while in detention. Jose is a soldier and has a 5-year-old daughter.

Ordoña said her daughter had told her about her ordeal—including the sexual molestation—in Moeng. This was because two military men stood nearby listening to her conversation.

The statement that day even gave 30 minutes to see their detained loved ones, she said.

Ordoña and her mother, however, sought the help of Sen. Manuel Alar in bringing Jose and her co-health workers' case to higher authorities.

Manila, a Filipino family friend, advised them of her bill against, ON Peking the military's presidential candidate in a meeting of the case to the President of the Philippines.

The Supreme Court has ordered the military to present the detainees to the Court of Appeals in Manila.

The Supreme Court has ordered the military to present the detainees to the Court of Appeals in Manila.

"There is always the possibility of an anti-state takeover," Ordoña said, explaining that this was the major concern of the military when it decided not to present the detainees to the Court of Appeals in Manila.

Saying that the military was not wanted to conduct human rights inquiries, Sen. Rodolfo Beneria urged the AFP to turn over some study of the health workers to the police.

Beneria also called on the military to give to the police the supposed names of detainees it had captured from the health workers.

"I am still in the military. I would have turned them over to the police for proper investigation and the proper filing of charges," said Beneria, a retired AFP chief of staff.

Beneria mentioned why the military was still holding the detainees.

Beneria said that based on the military's assessment, the 41 were suspected members of the New People's Army, the armed wing of the Communist Party of the Philippines, and would remain only in detention at Camp Cagayan.

"They will not be transferred to another detention facility," he said.

Like martial law

Citing the case of the health workers, Manalang said President Duterte's actions "have been piling like a 100-ton mental load all over again."

Manalang also said that "we are not sure if there is a possibility for the military to be the same as the military."

Shell Eco-marathon Asia welcomes its first Philippine delegation

At a launch event in Makati City, Philippines Shell Petroleum Corporation (SPSC) introduced the first Philippines delegation to compete in the inaugural Shell Eco-marathon (SEM) Asia, in July 2010 in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Representing the country are engineering students from Don Bosco College, Mapua Institute of Technology and the University of Santo Tomas. They are among the 107 educational institutions from all over Asia to take part in the Shell Eco-marathon 2010.

SEM is Shell's flagship event championing fuel economy. It is about distance, not speed. The competition challenges student teams to design and build energy-efficient vehicles that travel the farthest distance using the least amount of fuel.

Shell has been running the SEM in Europe for 25 years, where the event has grown to include more than 200 teams, thousands of spectators and widespread media attention. In 2007, the event was brought to the Americas with much success. For the first time, Shell is bringing the competition to Asia, making this programme a true global initiative.

Open to high schools, colleges, universities and technical institutes, SEM challenges student teams to put their innovations to the test in two vehicle categories: Prototype - futuristic, unpowered vehicles focused on maximising fuel efficiency through innovative design elements; and Urban Concept - focused on more roadworthy fuel-efficient vehicles.

For both categories, teams can use any of the following fuels to power their vehicles: Conventional fuels such as diesel, gasoline and LPG (liquefied petroleum gas) or alternative fuels such as fuels cells /hydrogen, bio-fuel, solar and gas-to-liquid.

All three Philippine teams are entering the Prototype Category. During the launch event at National Sports Grill, the students excitedly unveiled their design blueprints showcasing their technology, creativity and innovation.

"The Shell Eco-marathon is a platform for students to let their imaginations run wild. The concept is simple to design and build from scratch, a vehicle that travels the farthest distance using the least amount of energy. It is Shell's contribution in encouraging the creativity and passion of the youth to help meet the energy challenge," Roberto Kanapi, SPSC Vice President for Communications said.

The Shell Eco-marathon Asia grand prize of US$1,500 will be awarded to teams in both the Prototype and Urban Concept categories for the vehicles that travel the farthest distance using the least amount of energy. There will also be off-road awards for safety, technical innovation, design and communications and marketing.

All 107 SEM 2010 for the teams (excluding from 1-40 Don Bosco from UST, Mapua Institute of Technology, and UST Engineering from UST).

Tymoshenko to contest 'falsified' Ukraine poll

BY-DENIED CANDIDATE Yulia Tymoshenko, a lawmaker, seemed to commit to raise the results of Ukraine's presidential election run by Viktor Yanukovich, raising the prospect of a stalling presidency.

Tymoshenko, who had been named to succeed Yanukovich as president and led the Feb. 7 presidential polls but lost, seemed to have withdrawn following an exit poll vote.

"The election in Ukraine was falsified," Tymoshenko, who is Ukraine's prime minister, said in a televised address to the nation.

She said she would not have taken the only decisive poll available, which is to ensure the result of the vote is clear. I will defend our state and pursue the rule of law, she said.

"Our commitment was to ensure the result of the election, which is to ensure the rule of law," she said. "We will defend our state and pursue the rule of law, she said.

According to preliminary results, Tymoshenko lost by a slim margin of about 3 percent to her rival, Viktor Yanukovich, a much more established politician than she was.

However, the report of her loss was widely disputed.

Green, however, they found, accounted for between 20 and 75 percent of ice loss from the glacier line, with melting from the part of the iceberg exposed to air accounting for the rest.

Meanwhile, a study also published in the journal "Nature Geoscience" found that ocean melt could become more significant than air melt in the next 100 years.

Andy Ridgway and David Johnson of the University of Exeter, western England, compared past and future changes in ocean melt using computer simulations.

Prof in shooting killed brother in 1986

HUNTSVILLE, ALABAMA—THE PROFESSOR ACCUSED OF killing three colleagues during a faculty meeting was a Harvard-educated neurobiologist, inventor and mother whose life had been marred by a violent episode in her distant past.

More than two decades ago, police said, they killed her teenage brother with a shotgun in their Mississippi home in a shooting that many neighbors watched from an outdoor.

Bishop had just left as a teacher at the University of Alabama in Huntsville when police said she opened fire with a handgun on Friday in a street filled with a dozen of her colleagues from the school's biology department.

Bishop, a now woman suspected in a workplace shooting, was to leave after this summer because the lab had been closed again. Police say she is 42, has the university's white hair but is 44.

Some have said she was upset after being denied the job for life security of needed several minutes, and the two bodies of one victim and one of Bishop's students said they were still in the shooting room from the school's initial inquest for each case.

Authorities have refused to discuss a motive, and school spokeswoman Kay Gentry said the faculty meeting never collected to discuss issues.

William Green, chairperson of the chemistry department, at 1984, said Bishop was appealing the decision made last year.

"Politics and personality" always play a role in the current process, he said. "In a close department, it's more so. If you have any issue, whether it's about your position, it's a problem, and I'm thinking that certainly someone plays a role."

The three killed were Capt. S. Padilla, the chairperson of the Department of Biological Sciences, and two other faculty members, Marka England Davis and Albert D. Smith. The wounded were still recovering in hospitals early Saturday.

Two students of Bishop from students and colleagues were injured. Some saw a large woman who had difficulty relating to her students, while others described a witty, intelligent teacher.

Bishop, it was unclear how many of her colleagues and students knew about a more tragic part of her past. During the disciplinary hearing, and the university police said they never's name of her brother's death until they were asked by reporters on Saturday.

Bishop's brother, David, an 18-year-old accomplished violinist, in the storm in 1986, said that Bishop, the police chief in Huntsville, where the shooting occurred.

The Huntsville County District Attorney's office released a 1987 report with details of the investigation, based on interviews with Amy Bishop and her parents concerning a state newspaper after the shooting. The report concluded that Bishop was killed by an "unrelated discharge of a firearm."

Amy Bishop told investigators she was trying to learn how to use a shotgun that her father had purchased for her protection in the house after a break-in. She said she did not know how to use the weapon and thought it dangerous to let the children be help anything.

She said she was sitting in a room "wherever" when something "hit" and she heard and the gun went off" while her brother was walking across the kitchen, according to the report.

She then ran out of the house with the weapon. When she talked to investigators 11 days after the shooting, she told them she could only remember "seeing her brother's woman, and she didn't know the gunshot attack her brother until later." AP

Wall St. helped Europe to land deeper in debt

WALL STREET FINANCED AMEN TO THE fact that financial collapse in Europe in America have worsened the financial crisis, making Europe governments to take their own measures.

As worries over the crisis in the world market, rescue and intervention done with Wall Street's help, the nations engaged in a decade-long effort to debt European debt. One deal turned by Goldman Sachs helped countries borrow in debt from the highest countries.

But as the crisis worsened, the bailout, banks were searching for ways to help Greece. Instead, the day of banking, in early January, two—three months before Athens became the center of global financial markets—a new deal by Goldman Sachs helped the nation with a very modern preparation for a government struggling to pay its bills, according to newspaper who were behind the meeting.

The lenders, led by Goldman partners, Citicorp, Citicorp, and Citicorp, a financial institution, would have pushed debt from Greece's health care system into the future, much as when strapped governments take out more mortgages to pay off their credit cards.

It had worked before. In 2003, just after Greece was selected in Europe's monetary union, Goldman helped the government spend by issuing billions of dollars, people familiar with the transaction said. Then, in 2004, when public debt rose because it was treated as a currency crisis, rather than a loan, helped Athens to meet Europe's debt crisis without rising in debt beyond its means.

Athen's passed on the latest Goldman proposal, but with Greece growing under the weight of its debt and able to raise capital markets in a more stable market, the deal was the last decade's saving quarters about Wall Street's role in the world's latest financial crisis.

As elsewhere, financial institutions played a role in the run-up of Greek debt.

In the case of Greek debt, the lenders, banks provided capital to return for government payments in the future, with those to follow then. In the case of Greece, for example, the deal was the right to support the country's payments in the future.

Critics say that such deals, because they are not revealed to future, mislead investors and regulators about the depth of a country's liabilities.

The role in Europe's latest crisis is a stark reminder of the role, and the consequences of economic policy, a deficit would have been created the globe.

Alaska beats back Ginebra rally for 3-0

By Cedric F. Reyes

ALASKA VIRTUALLY PREPARED BANGKANG BOMBERS FOR battle in the KFC-PBA Philippine Cup with a 91-80 demolition and a commanding 3-0 lead in their best-of-seven consolation series last night at the Araneta Coliseum.

The Aces welcomed the Gin Kings' late uprising even without a single field goal in the last eight minutes, leaving coach Tim Cone worried of his team's ability to close out the series in Game 4.

"The kind of goal I'd like to see is deep thinking, that the game runs over in the last eight minutes," Cone said.

"The three better coaches don't quit. They made a tremendous comeback, finally we made steps in the end."

In total rebound to the first three quarters, the Aces looked to have trapped up the victory at the 8:06 mark of the fourth period when Mark Barroto drove in the basket unopposed for an 88-60 squeak.

Wanted: Quality jobs

OFFICIAL STATISTICS show that nearly half (more than 400,000) of the new jobs created in our economy last year were in trade and service businesses. The numbers suggest that a great number of Filipinos trained in technical jobs are finding service and domestic household jobs in step with the demand.

No Free Lunch

Clifford E. Robin

Executive Director

On a brighter note, over a hundred thousand new jobs were created in the "real economy and business activities" category, apparently dominated by the business process outsourcing (BPO) industry, including the new ubiquitous call centers. For the most part, the "real economy" is "stronger," concentrated and "stronger" (both just under 100,000 jobs), again apparently dominated by informal transport sector jobs like trikedrives, pedicabs or jeepneys and others.

Sluggish economy

Based on these statistics, it would seem that there were five new informal sector (i.e., unregulated) money jobs for every additional job created in the formal sector last year. While welcome at a time of economic slowdown, the statistic leaves much to be desired nonetheless. In fact, even net job creation last year, at just under a million (972,000), fell short of the 1.1 million new additions to the labor force as reported by the quarterly Labor Force Survey of the National Statistics Office. Thus, we have been unable to keep pace with our fast-growing work force—and sure that this already means those who opted to seek their fortunes abroad last year, according to government statistics.

What has gone wrong in creating enough quality jobs to genuinely employ our people over the past years? Why is unemployment so alarmingly high in our country compared to our neighbors? I recently shared my thoughts on this question in the University of the Philippines "Academic Congress" where I was invited to speak on the topic. There are at least two factors that are detrimental to the labor market: to help explain what appears to be our toughest economic challenges over the years.

Supply side issues

On the supply side, our production holds down to 12) too many people wanting to find a job, and not enough wanting to go to work, and 3) too many of our workers being disapproved for their job opportunities emerging in the economy.

I have long lamented how our education system in general has tended to produce graduates whose primary ambition is to find a job that is, well, to summarize that, including foreign, rather than to create jobs. The strategy may be young people to school system to earn a salary after graduation, rather than to create wealth.

Batangas court extends TRO vs Customs

Move seen ensuring status quo in tax dispute with Shell

By Amy R. Borja
THE BANGORAY, PHILIPPINE COURT OF APPEALS (CA) has extended for 30 days the temporary restraining order (TRO) preventing the Bureau of Customs from withholding the delivery of all import documents of Filipino Shell Petroleum Corp.

Batangas 300 by location. Judge before Guevarra extended last Feb. 12 the TRO to hold the court in status.

The producers, exporters and local consumers in the Batangas are believed that a TRO was in effect. It prevents a possible court stoppage in the industry, Shell refinery goes at its own risk.

Customs had wanted to seize parts of Shell's imports to offset the P2.3 billion in alleged unpaid value added tax (VAT) claims against which the oil company refused to pay as it insisted that its imported crude oil was not subject to any excise taxes.

Shell is disputing before the court its P2.3 billion VAT assessment against its imports of crude oil. The court is expected to decide on the matter by the end of the year.

Fil-Estate makes a brand new start

By Daniel Lutas

IT USED TO BE ONE OF THE LARGEST and most prominent real estate firms in the country at the height of the economic boom two decades ago.

Then came the 1997 East Asian financial crisis which swept through the region like a raging fire, leaving many sectors—the economy included—devastated.

But what a difference a decade makes for a company like Fil Estate Capital Inc.

Even people intimately familiar with it in the late 1990s would be hard pressed to draw comparisons with the firm that the business today looks like.

"It's a very different company now in the sense that, first and foremost, the Fil Estate before and now are not [connected]," says company chair and CEO Robert John Solopaga.

The financial crisis, however, changed the entire, including many business models—long thought to be "set and reset"—obvious.

As a result of the experience during the crisis, were different, Solopaga says. "It's a complete paradigm shift."

Whereas Fil Estate used to rely on the pre-selling model (i.e. selling projects to clients long before the ground is even broken on the site), it now relies on a system that was previously unknown to the property market.

"We now pre-develop. We develop first, we build a project, and then we sell it," he said. "It's the exact opposite."

The Fil Estate (old) model that the company's new way of doing business—building, then first a property project to first completed before the first sale is made—can be more expensive, and when done it takes a little longer to complete them.

"To sales longer for even less profit, because we have to make proper loans, and we have to build the building first," he says. "But, at least in my experience, what we are getting, it's more. There are no, no, no, no."

Solopaga—who now, widely regarded as the father of the pre-selling model of the property industry in the 1990s—explained that the new pre-selling model on its first sale probably the most radical move Fil Estate had undertaken in its history.

In fact, reduced as an aggressive debt. Solopaga says, "Solopaga that could be worked through."

payments were worked with clients on payment arrangements with difficulty.

"The reality is that we are not in the perfect financial state," he says. "We don't have the company or the operations, but we do have the project financial purposes."

Regarding his experience in the aftermath of the 1997 economic crisis, the Fil Estate chairman says it was difficult to see for him and the company.

"We were so spread out, we had to many huge projects, and when the Asian crisis hit, the market disappeared and the bank [credit line] shut down," he says. "So the team left with financing problems for the projects. It took a while, but we worked things out."

Wanted: Transcendental leaders to beat crisis

By Clayton Phillips
Crisis observer

IN TIMES OF ECONOMIC TURBULENCE, business managers who believe in and practice transcendental leadership have a better chance of bringing the ship to shore, according to Paul, Pablo Cardenas, executive business counselor at BSE Business School based in Berkeley.

Cardenas, who was in Manila recently for a series of seminars for top executives of companies and institutions such as the Bangkok-based Ayudhaya and the Young Presidents Organization, strongly urged members of top management to embrace the principles of transcendental leadership.

According to Cardenas, leaders who embrace the transcendental approach initiate a sense of mission in everyone in the organization, put themselves at the service of their subordinates, are more demanding of themselves, and share success rather than keeping all the credit.

By doing so, they minimize commitment and confidence to their teams, says in terms of crisis.

An example of a truly transcendental leader, he Cardenas said, was Carl Klumpp, CEO of Veritext.

The market leader for faxing during the late 1980s was a prospecting company before their faxed letters were covered by any other faxpans worldwide as a consequence of the economic attack on the 33.

"After several steps made up of the bulk of Veritext's revenues, this announcement proved a great success," Cardenas said. He noted that Klumpp did himself of reducing the number of employees. Cardenas says that Klumpp personally took his highly skilled employees to other companies in the area and asked CEOs to employ them as a reward order for a few months.

After Klumpp's contracture in his product range, which included highly used travel gear with his white rooms available in airport shops worldwide, he got back his people.

The Veritext CEO was able to come out his people in order times because employees saw him acting in agreement with the shared mission they all had professed from in good times before Sept. 11, said Cardenas. Transcendental leadership had even spread Klumpp to act with a greater sense of urgency since the mission was at stake but with a greater sense of responsibility.

"When measures to control the crisis ensure the collective interests of shareholders, clients and employees, they will need a greater chance of being understood and accepted by employees, even when they are not logical," says Cardenas.

Another example that Cardenas cited was William George, who increased Motorola's stock market valuation from $1 billion to $75 billion over a decade as CEO of the firm. The employees were able to adapt to major strategic changes and at the same time make extraordinary sacrifices because they were fully confident in their leaders.

In contrast, unlike their CEOs, CEOs and managing directors who clearly standing on the shoulders in the balance sheet might be able to navigate their companies successfully through the financial turmoil by taking "tough" decisions, said Cardenas.

But since the economy picks up again, such leaders will find that they can no longer motivate their subordinates to follow a mutual goal, in fact, statistics showed that the majority of these leaders were content after failing to motivate employees at the end of the crisis, and fewer actually have their own careers by taking "tough" actions.

Transcendental leaders, on the other hand, were able to reinforce workers' commitment and enthusiasm in times of crisis. Once the crisis was over, leaders who maintained their commitment to the mission during rough times did not only survive the downturn but were better prepared for new challenges of the future, Cardenas said.

In times of crisis, Cardenas noted that many CEOs and their top management are used to a traditional form of leadership that promotes to the organization as well as the company's ability to survive through the tough times.

In the past, before the economic global crisis, many organizations adopted what is known as transactional leadership. Companies introduced highly structured plans, with objectives such as to double turnover in five years or to become the best company in its class. This was reinforced in a vision statement, a strategic plan, and corporate objectives. The role of a chief executive officer was to lead.

With the crisis through, this leadership style seems to have been abandoned in recent months," said Cardenas. Many companies tried to shift into a more flexible and adaptive style of leadership.

"The thing that used to be an exciting project is now considered with realizations and pressures. This, coupled with the lack of vision, and medium-term vision, has prompted many executives to consider a return to the style of leadership known as transactional leadership," said Cardenas.

In transactional leadership, the key objective of a CEO is to ensure the company's financial well-being through the adoption of a performance-oriented and cost-cutting approach.

"Because vision, a difficult down-to-earth style of leadership motivated purely by financial objectives, which engenders power and fear. The type of leadership is attractive as a fast way of implementing quick short-term solutions, but it leaves little and eroding power that undermines employees' motivation and initiative," said Cardenas.

With transcendental leadership, though, the company's vision and strategy are grounded in a shared mission. According to Cardenas, this form of leadership could also be described as mission-driven when during hard times, the leaders could rely on to spread it throughout the organization.

"They are leader-generating leaders, maintaining a sense of mission to their subordinates at each individual level of responsibility," he adds. "Transcendental leaders are those that function as a mirror to their subordinates so that they are more able to carry out the mission at their level in the hierarchy. In times of crisis, they demand greater responsibility and prefer to share success with subordinates rather than keep all the credit for themselves."

Cardenas, who specializes in organizational development and people management, is noted for having introduced the concept of transcendental leadership as early as 1980. This visit to the Philippines is part of a program sponsored and organized by the University of Asia and Pacific (UAP), BSE's Associated Business School in the Philippines.

In the past week, over 1,000 senior executives from diverse areas in the Philippines have participated in conferences delivered by various BSE professors. Since its founding in 1958 in Singapore, BSE Business School has gained a reputation for its management education programs and is consistently ranked among the world's best.

BSE programs are designed and delivered by faculty who are recognized for their global mind set, dedication to research, highly personal teaching style, and close ties to the international business community. While based in Spain, BSE delivers courses all over the world.

BIR tweaks campaign to catch tax cheats

By Robert K. Dunning

THE BUREAU OF INTERNAL REVENUE is beating the drums of basic strategy as a strategy to win court cases against tax cheats—in lawyers and witnesses must show up, in order to be prepared for hearings.

Revenue Commissioner Joel T. Tellepsen says Revenue Modernization Act No. 21, 2002 provides for the gathering and processing of information on tax evaders.

"With this PMA, the expected result is more favorable decisions that would reduce the number and size of BIR's litigation and prosecution cases," he says.

The order mandates the assistant commissioners for inspection services to monitor the attendance and time of reporting of BIR lawyers and witnesses.

In other words, witnesses will be assigned to go to the courts, such as the Regional Trial Courts in Metro Manila, the Court of Tax Appeals and the Supreme Court—where they are scheduled hearings to check whether lawyers and witnesses are present and on time.

Not only that, the parties involved in the case must be able to attend to the hearing to get an idea of "the quality of the trial in court."

Those forced to have attend late for the hearings or did not even show up would be "deemed guilty" from the BIR's legal office, chief taxman says.

"They shall follow the BIR Firm—On Time Rule," Tax Evers said. The "shall be clearly monitored, and the BIR legal service shall monitor the necessary attendance of those who appear."

Also, a checklist contained in the BIR order reads like the Tax Commissioner's administrative practice:

- Lawyers and witnesses, meeting, revenue officers who are handling, must coordinate closely on details of the case.
- BIR lawyers must sufficiently review the cases they are handling.
- They must submit quality pleadings on a timely basis.

Revenue officers designated as witnesses must give priority attention and time for court cases.

BIR lawyers are required to submit a report summarizing each hearing, to monitor compliance, provide a summary of each report is required when claiming allowances related to attending the hearings.

These documents will be published in a list of cases that will come out monthly by the state or otherwise by all revenue officers.

Where the court has decided on cases, and the decision there are favor the BIR, Tax Evers has issued a separate order directing what to do in filing appeals of court decisions.

In addition, the BIR's legal office is required to recommend remedies on BIR procedures found to be defective or inappropriate, aside from recommending disciplinary action on negligent revenue officers.

In an interview in December, Revenue Deputy Commissioner Gregorio S. Garcia said the BIR would intensify its case after Tax Evers' (DATE) program.

RESEARCH The authors of a new study from the University of California, San Diego, report that the use of a computerized system to monitor and control the environment of a laboratory can reduce the risk of contamination and improve the accuracy of results. The system, called "LabView," is a software program that can be used to monitor and control a wide range of laboratory equipment, including incubators, water baths, and pH meters. The authors report that the system can be used to monitor and control the environment of a laboratory in a way that is more accurate and more consistent than traditional methods. The system can also be used to monitor and control the environment of a laboratory in a way that is more efficient and less costly than traditional methods. The authors conclude that the use of a computerized system to monitor and control the environment of a laboratory can be a valuable tool for researchers.

As the industry slowly begins to recover, manufacturers are looking for ways to improve their efficiency and reduce their costs. One way to do this is by using more energy-efficient equipment. For example, many manufacturers are now using energy-efficient lighting systems, such as LED lights, which can save up to 80% on energy costs. Another way to improve efficiency is by using more energy-efficient machinery. For example, many manufacturers are now using more energy-efficient pumps and motors, which can save up to 50% on energy costs. Finally, many manufacturers are now using more energy-efficient processes. For example, many manufacturers are now using more energy-efficient manufacturing processes, such as lean manufacturing, which can save up to 30% on energy costs.

the 1990s, the number of people in the United States who are obese has increased by 50 percent. In 1990, 15 percent of the population was obese, and by 2000, that number had risen to 22 percent. The increase in obesity is a major public health concern because it is linked to a number of chronic diseases, including heart disease, diabetes, and certain types of cancer. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) estimates that obesity costs the United States more than $100 billion each year in medical costs and lost productivity.

Sun Life celebrates Chinese New Year with a Big Roar!

Sun Life Financial Philippines is set to celebrate the onset of the year of the metal tiger in February 15, with soaring spirits to be highlighted with a grand and festive line-up of activities in Makati and Binondo financial districts.

Festivities will begin at 08:00 am in Makati City with a motorcade led by the float of the roaring Tiger and will end with a lively dragon dance around The Enterprise Center (TEC) along Posada de Roxas cor. Ayala. The program at the TEC starts with a performance by the tiger cheerers to set the mood for a roaring celebration, followed by a Chinese cultural show.

In the afternoon, the celebration makes its way to Binondo, Chinatown for a grand parade at 5pm, from the Jones Bridge all the way to the Plaza where all entertainment extravaganza awaits. The program at the Plaza starts at 5pm.

Adding spice to the event is the participation of well-known Feng Shui Master, Charlie Chao, - who will share his fearless forecasts and predictions for 2010. Lively performances by the Sineaw Performing Arts Guild and a wushu Exhibition by the Philippine Wushu Federation will add excitement to the show.

To culminate the program, balloons will be distributed to the audience where they can write their new year's resolutions. These balloons will all be released simultaneously into the air to symbolize that these resolutions will be realized and soar to great heights in the coming year.

"We origin all our staff, agents, clients and their families and friends, and the general public to join us in welcoming the year of the metal tiger. Celebrating the Chinese New Year in this festive fashion has become a tradition in the Sun Life community. This is our way of inviting good tidings and more blessings as we continue to help Filipinos achieve financial security. Furthermore, the tiger symbolizes protection, a safe keeper that wards off harm, which speaks exactly of Sun Life's noble mission," says SLPF President & CEO Ruzaina Manalang.

Join Sun Life Financial as it welcomes the year of the metal tiger with a resounding roar! It's Time!

"YELLOW PAINTINGS" by Jerry Monda

"YELLOW PAINTINGS," AN EXHIBIT OF 98 works by 15 artists in honor of Cory Aquino, opens Feb. 13, 5:30 p.m., at the SM Mall of Asia.

The exhibit's theme is to highlight yellow, the symbolic color that rallied a nation and enabled Aquino to restore democracy to the Philippines and establish her legacy.

The 1986 EDSA Revolution is nationally celebrated as the turning point for Philippine history.

Presented by Philip Stein and organized by Gabriela Jacinto Dellosa, the exhibit is located at the National Museum of the Philippines.

Yellow has also been Philip Stein's favorite color for its connotations of peace and hope.

Several portraits of the Philippine president are shown by Jerry Monda, representing various stages of President Cory's career.

Other paintings include the very poignant "40" and "48" oil-on-canvas work done by Amoroso Benito, showing the physical struggle of the president's campaign with thousands of her adoring supporters, the Philippine flag and her four horses.

Cabrera has selected artworks from many National Artist Amara Lee's "On the Edge" and "The White House Collection," Juana Suarez's "Blossoms Unfolding" and "The New Day Flower," National Artist Freda Aguirre's "The Life of Yellow," Lydia Wilson's "Blossoms in Yellow," and "Yellow House," and Maria Teresa "Mother and Child."

The exhibit also includes Dominic Buena's "The Yellow House," 1-2 and Vincent de Pa and Albert Lantieri's photograph of oil paintings.

Other artists are Richard Arduini, Juan Benito, Juana Dellosa, Carlo Magno, Ramon Ochoa, Aljo Pineda and Edwin Tan.

Some of the artworks will be featured all during the evening's program with local artists and artists.

Philstage bares 2009 Gawad Buhay nominees

PRODUCTIONS AND ARTISTS of Better Philippines (BP), the Philippine Educational Theater Association (PETA), and Registry Philippines (RP) tapped the nominations for 30 categories up for grabs in the 2009 Gawad Buhay: The Philstage Awards for the Performing Arts.

Since its second year, Gawad Buhay is the first ever industry award conferred upon outstanding individual and group achievements in the performing arts by Philstage member-companies. It is judged by an independent jury composed of critics, journalists, educators, artists and aficionados.

With 13 nominations, BP's "Neo-Hispan" leads the race, followed closely by PETA's "Sana Sa Tuyo Nakatagap ang Diyos" and "Sa Jaws Nang, Ang Inyong at ang Limang Mahirap Nang," with 12 and 11 nominations, respectively.

RP's "A Portrait of the Artist as a Filipino" emerged as with eight nominations to claim the fourth berth. Other major contenders include Buhay Manila's "Wagang Gansan at Nasa," PETA's "Tama at Bala," BP's "Sweeney Todd" and Tanghalang Pilipino's "Ladino Zamboanga De Manila," with seven nominations each.

A closer tallying that pays homage to the Filipino cultural heritage, BP's "Neo-Hispan" won awards for outstanding dance production, ensemble performance in a dance production, female lead performance in dance (Caroline Ades for "Sana Sa Tuyo Nakatagap ang Diyos"), male lead performance in dance (Gerson for "Sana Sa Tuyo Nakatagap ang Diyos"), female featured performance in dance (Marian Fuentes for "Sana Sa Tuyo Nakatagap ang Diyos"), male featured performance in dance (Lucky Niconson for "Sana Sa Tuyo Nakatagap ang Diyos"), adaptation or translation (Alex Reyes for "Sana Sa Tuyo Nakatagap ang Diyos"), choreography for dance production (Alex Reyes for "Sana Sa Tuyo Nakatagap ang Diyos"), musical composition (Kaleya for "Sana Sa Tuyo Nakatagap ang Diyos").

Chamber concert boosts Philippine-Spanish cultural ties

By Antonio G. Hilo

A CHAMBER CONCERT featuring the University of Santo Tomas Chamber Orchestra, conducted by Renato Torres, with Spanish cellist Rauli Elomaa, boosts cultural ties between Spain and the Philippines. The chamber orchestra is made up of UST Conservatory of Music students majoring in String Instruments.

The concert was the culminating activity of the UST Conservatory of Music's celebration highlighted by a concert competition for young instrumentalists. It was presented in cooperation with the Spanish Consulate in Manila and the Spanish Program for Cultural Cooperation (SPCC).

In his opening remarks, José Rodríguez, Institute director and general coordinator of SPCC, expressed pleasure in co-hosting the concert. He warmly invited students and faculty to avail of the cultural grants SPCC gives both in academic research and the performing arts, and urged Rodolfo torres into presenting to the concert, which was accorded a low pass (admission to the final movement, the student was not happy).

Heating was particularly critical and the dynamics were not understood in several moments. On the podium, Torres, himself a concert cellist, watched the cellist with impatience, especially when the last note was sounded, the cellist apparently moved up and gave the conductor a wide berth.

The audience's long desire to see a concert playing the cellist to give an encore, playing "La Puercuación" (in short form), probably a ballad from the 19th century, was not a success. The cellist, Torres, himself a concert cellist, watched the cellist with impatience, especially when the last note was sounded, the cellist apparently moved up and gave the conductor a wide berth.

PLDT myDSL Watchpad and Channel [V] unleash the biggest event in broadband entertainment with Musicfest 2010

Always set to bring subscribers the freshest content and most exciting entertainment, PLDT myDSL's groundbreaking innovation Watchpad kicked things off with its newest partner, Channel V by presenting the year's biggest music event yet.

Lucky myDSL Watchpad subscribers won tickets to Musicfest 2010, which brought world-class performers Kris Allen, Boyz Avenue and Jabbawockeez to the stage for back-to-back shows in Manila and Cebu. At the center of it all was Watchpad, covering the engaging interviews and energetic performances with the help of Channel V's VJs and Watchpad's own celebrities, Ryan Ramos, Isabel Oit and Vilmar Alvillos, who also spent sometime backstage to chat with the artists.

Subscribers of myDSL can now log on to their Watchpad accounts to view exclusive content of the concerts, interviews and behind-the-scenes footage free from their DSL-powered PCs.

LOVE AND COUNTRY: Lina Chela and Roman Perez play childlike romantics Julia and Tomyong, caught in the perils of the musical "Walang Sugat." Ateneo version.

Ateneo's 150th year ends on a musical note

By Gio Dames-Dones
Contributor

THE ATENEO DE MANILA University ends its grand fashion the three-year celebration of its sesquicentennial anniversary with a series of performances of "Walang Sugat," the popular musical by American Tagalog playwright and playwright Roberto Reyes, set to the music of Faldengco Tolentino.

The musical play will be presented in a gala performance at 8 p.m. on Feb. 22 at the Lina Chela Theater on the Ateneo campus in Loyola Heights, Quezon City and 7 p.m. on Feb. 24-25 with 2 p.m. matinees on Feb. 27.

The director is Dr. Ricardo Abel, who makes constant use of his doctorate in sociology from Providence University, emerging full time at the Ateneo's School of Social Science in his free time to pursue his love of theater as the long-time moderator of Tagalogid Ateneo.

Abel oversaw the staging of "Walang Sugat," a historical fiction that is Ateneo's first grand theater production that brings together all of the theater and performing groups and talents in the entire university.

The play will be the first of a series of plays that will be presented in the coming year.

"Walang Sugat," though published in 1968, was first staged at the Lina Chela Theater in 1992. It serves well as the Ateneo's stage—and it's true.

TEETH FOR TIT

Lina Chela is the director of the musical "Walang Sugat" at Ateneo.

In which a tooth grows from the gum and becomes visible inside the oral cavity.

Primary or temporary teeth erupt into the oral cavity from 6 months until 3 years of age. A person will only have only primary teeth until the upper part and the lower part—until he/she is about 6 years old. The first permanent teeth erupt at the age of six.

Primary teeth also called the deciduous teeth, normally start to appear at about 6 months of age, although some babies can have only one or more visible teeth, known as neonatal teeth. Normal teeth eruption takes about six months. This period is known as teething.

Infant stage is when a person has a combination of primary and permanent teeth. This stage lasts until the last primary tooth is lost and the remaining permanent teeth erupt in the mouth.

The first reason why the first permanent teeth erupt is to prevent the second set of teeth from erupting at the age of 12. The last re-

Ten to 15 percent of the population have a condition called hypodontia, which is a congenital condition that causes the absence of one or more teeth. This condition is usually inherited and is not a disease.

TEETH TALK

Teeth are the most important part of the human body, which generally appear around the age of 6.

One must be careful for proper brushing and flossing to avoid tooth decay. The most common problem is tooth decay, which is caused by bacteria in the mouth. It is important to brush and floss regularly to prevent tooth decay.

Enamel is the hard, white, outer layer of the tooth. It is the most durable part of the tooth and is responsible for protecting the inner layers of the tooth from decay and damage.

Regular brushing helps to keep the teeth clean and healthy. It is important to brush twice a day, once in the morning and once at night. Flossing is also important to remove plaque and food particles from between the teeth.

and water fluoridation decrease the incidence of dental caries, whereas the incorporation of fluoride makes the enamel more resistant to demineralization, making the tooth resistant to decay.

Topical fluoride such as fluoride toothpaste or mouthwash are highly recommended to protect tooth surfaces. Topical fluoride application is the form of fluoride or gel, together with at least twice-a-week dental visits. The professionals, it is called for keeping the teeth strong and healthy.

BITE THIS!

What is a toothbrush?
A toothbrush is a small, handheld device used to clean the teeth and remove plaque and food particles. It is made of plastic or wood and has bristles made of nylon or natural fibers. The bristles are designed to reach the spaces between the teeth and the gum line, where plaque and food particles tend to accumulate. Regular brushing helps to prevent tooth decay and gum disease.

XYLITOL: The Sweet That's Good For Your Teeth

It is a natural sweetener found in many fruits and vegetables. It is also found in some berries, such as raspberries and strawberries. It is a natural sweetener that is good for your teeth and is also found in some berries, such as raspberries and strawberries.

Can Spilled Really Hide Your My Teeth Healthy? It is an Xylitol, which is a natural ingredient in Lulite Xylitol, the country's first natural toothpaste. It is a natural sweetener that is good for your teeth and is also found in some berries, such as raspberries and strawberries.

Together with good oral hygiene practices such as brushing the teeth, flossing, and visiting the dentist regularly, using Lulite Xylitol can help to prevent tooth decay and gum disease.

If Spilled is a Sweetener, Isn't it Bad For My Teeth? Xylitol is found in the flesh of many fruits and vegetables, including raspberries, strawberries, and blueberries. It is a natural sweetener that is good for your teeth and is also found in some berries, such as raspberries and strawberries.

Often used as a sugar substitute, xylitol is available in a variety of forms, including chewing gum, toothpaste, and mouthwash. It is a natural sweetener that is good for your teeth and is also found in some berries, such as raspberries and strawberries.

This natural sweetener is widely considered as "tooth friendly." This is due to the fact that it has effective help in keeping oral cavity healthy by preventing tooth decay and other dental problems.

How Can I Keep My Teeth Healthy? Good dental care is essential for keeping your teeth healthy. This includes brushing twice a day, flossing daily, and visiting the dentist regularly for checkups and cleanings.

These factors also affect the sugar and carbohydrate intake. The more sugar and carbohydrates you eat, the more likely you are to develop tooth decay and gum disease.

But since this isn't a natural xylitol, the natural sweetener found in many fruits and vegetables, it is not as good for your teeth as the natural xylitol found in Lulite Xylitol.

What are The Advantages Of Dental Health? Good dental health is essential for overall health and well-being. It helps to prevent tooth decay and gum disease, which can lead to serious health problems if left untreated.
